

Biodiversity observations inside and outside protected areas across the Jervis Bay region in South East Australia

¹Eren Turak, ²Margarita Goumas, ²Belinda Brown, ¹Tim Cooney, ¹Wayne Kuo and ¹Phil Craven
¹ NSW Office of Environment and Heritage (OEH) ²Parks Australia

- Tracking biodiversity change inside and outside protected areas.
- Jervis Bay region, south of Sydney
 - Booderee National Park managed by Australian Government
 - Ten protected areas managed by the NSW Government (OEH)
 - State forests, military zones, residential development, agriculture.
- Biodiversity observations in the past 25 years.
- Using different frameworks to identify gaps, compare coverage
- Large volumes of data collected for numerous programs
- All land tenures, most major taxa groups, threat categories and ecological themes covered.
- Potential benefits from regional scale analysis of data

